MINING LAWS. Our " capable and consistent " contem; ory, as with characteristic complacency, it styles itself, acting, we suppose, upon the happy suggestion of a lucid interval, has made to it a very creditable attempt indeed to partners out prospecting for them in another present to its readers the mining question in such a form as they would be likely to separate a little wheat from a great deal of chaff. In a word, it has endeavored to show that it was equally at home, whether to dealt merely in argument, or what seems more to its liking, in personal abuse. As we have no desire to follow it in the gentlemanly attempt to bespatter us with all the very choice epithets in which it is so evidently proficient, we shall endeavour to confine ourselves to what is put forward as arguments and refutations. We do not see that any public good is to be gained by devoti g and amusing characteristics of even the Chro nicles' auto-biographer of "an incompeten ill conditioned time sewing-shall we sayscribbler," like Mrs. Sarah Gamp. We would simply borrow asphrase, and say to that old lady, " We don't mind how much ve talks Sarey, but what h-ever ye says talk

In its Sunday mornings' issue, our cotemporary, looking from the monopolists stand point, ranked us among the defenders of the present anomolies of the British Columbian mining laws. Why has that been done? Simply because we opposed the conversion into "real estate" of mining claims in British Columbia-more especially in placer diggings because we opposed the unrestricted acquisition by any man of an indefinite number of mining claims in any mining district; because in short, we have endeavoured to defend that principle which insures the distribution o mineral lands among the masses of the popu lation in preference to one which would lock them up in the hands of a few. In doing so we have maintained that a contrary policy would act injuriously towards the best inter ests of these colonies, by giving an undue preponderence to capitalists over the independant working man, and thus preventing the settlement of the country, whilst the mines are still unexhausted. The above are the so termed " amomalies' we defended and still defend. But are they anomolies, are they the rule or are they the exception 2 We cited the example of California and Australia, the greatest gold producing countries of the world, in which every description of diggings are found to show that a similar practice to that we advocate has been tried and been found to work well Our contemporary made a feeble attempt to turn our position with respect to California, Secing, however, how untenable was the ground it occupied in that respect, it has in yesterday's issue tacitly abandoned it, without having the manliness to acknowledge the defeat. To our argument in Tuesday's issue, from the example of California, Australia Washoe, New Zealand, Idalis and Colorado our contemporary has not a word to say. We have defended the general rule regulating mining property in other countries, and our opponent tas heen the advocate and defender the anomaly. It is no anomaly for British Columbia to follow the example of those countries that have had most experience in the matter. Nor will she depart from the principle she has adopted to suit the whims or wishes of either experimentalists or speculators to the injury of the hard working mining public who are now building up that country Driven from every position it first occupied. our contemporary is forced, at last, to fall back upon the petition of the Grand Jary of Wil liams Creek for support. By a garbled selection and patching together of extracts from that document, it manages to make the jury men give a quasi support to the position taken up by mining speculators. But after all have even the Grand jury at Williams Creek sought for the conversion of mining claims into real estate. There is not a word in the document. so far as we have yet seen, that calls for such a change as that. Not a sentence quoted by our cotemporary will necessarily lead to that inference. Even if it did, what are the arguments produced in favor of so great a change? Not a single one. It is not even necessary for the purpose of making that species of property negotiable and mortgageable; personal property generally, is just as negotiable as real estate. It is not necessary even for the purpose of encouraging the in vestment of capital. Capital has been ar is invested in every other gold mining country of any note, without such provisions. It not absolutely necessary for securing to the merchant payment for the supplies he may without trenching upon the principle of allow ing only a limited number of claims to be held by any individual in a district-and that is by a well regulated lien law or-if that should not be found acceptable-by an attachment law similar to that of California.

When the claim is worth nothing, no legislation can improve it. No law making in the one acquainted with the differences betwee

California and British Columbia would, o slight reflection, find to be a mare's nest of th that mining lands should be declared pro mortgage to a greater extent than at present but also with respect to other mining matters

We are fully aware of the necessity of giving encouragement of capital in mining claims and we still advocate a thorough revision the mining laws and regulations. Among those changes is one which we apprehend will give ample room for the free investmen of capital without going to the unwarrantable length of allowing free trade in mining claim and that is simply to follow the example a California and cut down the extent of present large mining districts. The Caribon district, according to a recent proclamation extends from east to west over a space o about three meredians of longitude, and free north to south considerably over one paralle of latitude. This vast extent o suef ce is one ming district. According to law only two me by pre-emption and the other by it located in California, would be divided up into an indefinite number of small mining districts, quite distinct from each other, both in officers and laws, though sub are to be inserted is specified, will be continued until | ject to the law of the State. Although the law, of each man holding only a limited num ber of claims prevails as a general thing r each district, yet one may go to the next dis-trict and hold claims there also, without torteiting his right to his property elsewhere. Capitalists can thus safely loan money o purchase c'aims in each district as long ey have a cent to risk. By this means all the capital is not sunk in one spot. It is spread over the country and contributes to ts general development. Miners working a good claim in one district can have their without the risk upon having a new claim recorded in their name, of having the old one umped. The absence of similar arrangenents in Cariboo we regard as an "anomaly, which we should like to see done away with That mining district is peculiarly well adapted for being divided up into mining precincts or districts, with local recorders Each creek may be said to be a natural district. For judicial puroposes a larger district might suit, but for mining purposes small ones will be found mose convenient. Our cotemporary will thus see, whilst we do support the amendment of the mining laws of British Columbia, we are not to be numbered ournal. Before attempting to accuse us of consistency, we would advise our morning Oracle to become a little better acquainted next time with the subject upon which it as

Cruise of the Kingfisher.

The sloop Kingfisher, Captain Stevenson, left Victoria June 27, on a trading voyage to the north, having on board the owner, Mr. Curlin. She proceeded up the inside passage, calling at Nanaimo, Comax, Lecultha, and all the ranches along the coast, and reached Fort Rupert on the 17th of July.

Did not experience any trouble from the Indians on the east coast of the Island with he exception of the Mathilpa tribe, who were very saucy, telling the Captain that if he refused to trade with them on their own terms, they would help themselves.

The sloop visited an Inlet on the mainland, supposed to be Knight's Inlet, and went a considerable distance up to the head and found it a broad navigable sheet of water, free from dangers and Possessing good

It is the opinion of those who were on board the Kingfisher that unless a man-ofboard the Kingfisher that unless a man-of-war is sent to enforce reparation, that other tribes will be induced to follow the bad example set, and bloodshed will ensue. That portion of the coast is unquestionably too dangerous for white men to visit in small craft. It was ascertained that the chief of the Clayoquot tribe had visited the Nootka Indians to make enquiries respecting the Indian boy—one of his own tribe—belonging to the "Trader" who had been murdered, and that he had been pollatched with a sea otter skin to keep quiet. skin to keep qulet.

Here they constructed some beats, and arrived at Peace River, a distance of 25 miles, in a few hours. They proceeded thence to Finlay's Branch, a distance of 125 miles, where they commenced prospecting. On the North Branch, they got four cents to the pan on one of the bars. They proceeded us the North Branch for 100 miles, without finding any greater inducement to stay. The country here was mountainous in its character. * * * The British Government is determined not to take a hasty step about the recognition of the Confederacy. They appeal to Mr, Roebuck to consent to a further postponement of the debate. They wish to know the result of what ought to be the decisive battle between General Meade and the invading army. Even Mr. Gregory, who says if that the friends of the Federal Government of the House could all be carried off in the House could all be carried to the United States troops to encounter the enemy that the friends of the Custom House at the Invoice, but that no reduction of during the House of said floods and Merchandise arising from the House could all be allowed, unless the Invoice, but that no reduction of the undersigned are placed to the Custom House and th of war and the most powerful artifiery ever sent from this country to the South. Poland as an act of war; and so, in a similar case, would England treat the recognition of Treland.

England's most terrible bugbear, however, lies nearer home. It is the French invasion. Parliament is debating night after night on Parliament is debating night after night on vast expenditures, amounting to hundreds of dollars, to provide against a French invasion. Immense fortresses are being built for the protection of the dock yards at Portsmouth—not from attack by sea, but from an army which it is feared might be landed to destroy these. There are constant and very costly experiments going on with the ironclads and artillery, all looking to the same event. England's great bugaboo is the Emperor and the power which steam has given him, of throwing 100,000 men upon the English coast. The channel is no longer an obstacle. It enables the invader to choose his point of invasion. The French ironclads have only to engage the English channel fleets, while the steam

Mr. Dayton, it is said, informed the French Government that any movement toward recognition would be looked upon as cassis belli by the Federal Government, and would compel him to demand his passports. It may be that Lord Palmerston's anxiety to put off Mr. Roebuck's motion may have been caused by a similar hint on the part of Mr. Adams. This was the ground taken at the beginning of the war by Mr. Seward, and I do not see how the Government with a proper respect for its own dignity. Seward, and 1 do not see now the dovernment with a proper respect for its own dignity, could take any other. There is no doubt that Russia would treat the recognition of the recognition of the recognition of the results of the regular druggists.

The French ironclads have only to engage the English channel fleets, while the steam transports, carrying 1,000 or 1,200 men each, can steam from Cherbourg and land on the southern or eastern coast and march quietly up to London. No doubt it could be done—and if the Emperor chose to make war upon England, no doubt it would be; but he will not so long as England does what he requires. That is the only question. England cannot do as she wishes, so long as she is exposed to an invasion by greatly superior military power. England, therefore, is spending all these millions for independence. If France demands that England shall join in the recognition of Southern independence, I submit that your quarrel is with France. England dare not act alone, and dare not refuse to

A Word to the Aged. A WOTH TO THE ABOUT.

In the decline of life the loss of vital force consequent upon physical decay can only be safely supplied by some viriging preparation which recruits he strength and spirits, without entailing the examination which is always the final effect of ordinary stimulants. We tender to the aged FLOOR CAOTHS--Michael Nairn & Co's Scottish Floor Cloth-particularly noticed in the International Exhi-bition of 1862. Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, As an invigerant and restorative, immediate in its beneficial action and permanent in its effects. It tones the stomach, improves the appetite, and acts like a charm upon the spirits.

For Females.

Thousands of ladies resort to it as a remedy for hysteria, fluttering of the heart, nervious headache, vertigo, general debility and all peculiar disturbances and derangements to which, as a sex, they are subject. It cheers and enlightens the depressed mental powers, as well as strengthear the body, and its use is never followed by any reaction.
